

Inclusively Made Accreditation

Inclusively Made Accreditation is for both Creators and Commissioners committed to embedding inclusion across their production portfolio. Accreditation signifies a company's dedication to producing content that meets Inclusively Made's rigorous standards, demonstrating ongoing commitment to diversity and accessibility both on-screen and behind the scenes.

Accreditation

Inclusively Made Accreditation is awarded to teams (or business units) within an organisation. For smaller organisations, a 'team' may be the entire business, and for other organisations it will be business units. Here are some examples:

- Corporation: marketing team or internal production team
- Creative Agency: account or client team
- Production Company: all staff from one office

Organisations can accredit as many teams as they desire. Each team nominates one person as the Inclusion Champion who is the main point of contact and advocates for inclusion within their team.

Certification Training

To become Accredited Inclusively Made, and a valued member of the Inclusively Made Community, each team must complete the Inclusively Made Certification training, and will have full access to the Inclusively Made Resource Kit for best practice guidance by the broader team.

For organisations consisting of multiple teams, more than one team may attend the Certification Training so that those additional teams are ready to become Accredited when required. We recommend up to a maximum of 50 people per training session for best results.
